Great Men's Love Letters

CABLYLE AND JANE WELSH. The courtship of Thomas Carlyle and ane Welsh was one of the most sto of any romances of this character. Jane had been in love several times before meeting Carlyle. They were introduced by Edward Irving. Carlyle, at the time, was rough, uncouth and just from the farm. They studied German together and the girl's active, eager mind devel-oped rapidly. At length Carlyle prooped rapidly. At length Carlyle pro-posed marriage and she refused in this

"She would nearly plunge headfirst from the windows watching for his return from a day of toll and their joyous reunion in the front hall sounded loud and clear in every apartment, causing all sorts of alarm and apprehension. Other husbands grew peevish at their wives, pointing out that they were not greeted with a like fervor, and their wives were greatly relieved when the bride eloped with another man and the busband was arrested as a bigamist, with a former family. It quite cleared the atmosphere."

"The Honeysweets are not at all that upon my chest, crying My apple dumping: or something like that—and we'll go into the house with our arms as far around each other's waist as they'll reach. IN THE DAY'S NEWS Is the North Pole Headed South?

Is the latitude of Norwich changing?

Is your home closer to the equator or the pole than it once was?

These may appear to be foolish questions to the average man. He has no doubt grown to look upon the earth's 'belt' and its axis as immovable lines over though these even though they are imaginary. But an astronomer in London was quoted the other day as asserting that the distance between Naples, Italy, and the equator has been shortened by a mile and a half during the past 51 years, and that Green. wich has apparently moved half a mile toward the tropics in less than two decades. The possibility of such changes in latitude is discussed in the following bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society:

"There is no question that latitudes change, but there is a very large question whether the changes are of any considerable magnitude and whether they congress of the Sixth Kentucky district, born tinue for any great length of time in the same direction. The variations that have same direction. The variations that have been established are due to a slight wab-bling of the earth like that of a top which is not spinfling evenly around its axis. This irregularity does not change the direction of the axis itself but does change the point on the earth's surface (the pole-point) from which the axis emerges. By such changes most points on the earth would have their positions altered with reference to the poles and to the equator, which is always 90 degrees fro mine pole-point, and therefore follows it in any movement which it makes.

"If the earth's simplest possible rota-tion had had a single wabble added to it the pole-point would trace a closed path that is, it would return to the same po-sition again and again after the completion of definite, equal periods. But there are at least two distinct and unequal and one in about 14 months. Their com bination causes the pole-point to wander in a rather uneven way, tracing lines that are very roughly eliptical and which cross and recross each other. But these two known wabbles cause only a very slight variation from a steady rotation; the wanderings of the pole-point because of them are believed to be always within a circle 60 feet across. The latitude of any city would be changed therefore because city would be changed, therefore, because of these two recognized wabbles of the earth, at most only 30 feet north or south of its mean position

"There are other possibilities, however in regard to change of latitude. One is In regard to change of latitude. One is that there are other as yet unrecognized wabbles extending over longer periods which cause the pole-point to wander in circles or elipses that may be larger than the 60 foot circle. Another is that there may be forces in operation which shift the pole-point steadily southward practi-cally along a certain fine of longitude. Finally, latitude changes might be due to local movements, either a silding of relalocal movements, either a sliding of relatively small sections of the earth's crust, or to a recenty postulated 'floating' of the

"The information assembled by the in-ternational latitude service has been in-terpreted in various ways. The changes in latitude observed were very small and it is recognized that the possibilities of error due to imperfect instruments, inac-cursoles in star declinations, and the hu-man equation were many. One careful analysis by the United States coast and senderly survive however seems to indigeodetic survey, however, seems to indi-cate that the pole-point is shifting pro-gressively southward toward the continent of North America. This would mean in effect the cities of the United States are moving slowly to the north.

"You need have little worry, though, over the likelihood that the North Pols will turn up some day in your back yard. Even though one becomes generous with assumptions and assumes that there is a southward movement of the pole-point and that it will continue steadily, its slowness makes the assumed shift almost negligible. The analysis referred to seems to indicate a southward drift of the pole amounting to a triffe over six inches a year. This would amount to less than one mile in ten thousand years. In one million years the change would equal only $5 miles. At the rate assumed, in a million years New York city would not be shifted as far north as the latitude of shifted as far north as the latitude of Boston today, Fresno would have reach-ed a point only 23 miles north of the present position of San Francisco, and Memphis would be shifted to about the present position of the south line of Kentucky."
